The main symptoms of sinus problems are runny nose, stuffy nose, frequent sneezing, and post-nasal drip. Sometimes sinus headaches, which mainly involve the area around the nose or forehead, are also involved.

These comments pertain mostly to cases in which sinus problems are the sole, or main complaint. If sinus problems are accompanied by a cold or flu, the cold or flu should be the main focus of treatment. If sinus problems occur together with an asthma attack, the asthma should be the focus of treatment. This is true in other, similar combinations of sinus problems with other complaints, as well.

The first kind of causes of sinus problems are external pathogens, usually Wind-Cold, Wind-Heat, or Wind-Dampness. In Traditional Chinese Medicine Theory, the nose is considered to be the front gate or opening to the Lung, and the Lung controls the skin and its functions. That is why invasion of any of these areas by external pathogens, including the Lung itself in cases of Lung infection or asthma, can cause symptoms of sinus problems.

The second kind of causes of sinus problems is internal disruptions of the functions of the Lung, Liver, Gallbladder, and Kidney.

Surely there are other causes of sinus problems, as well. Here, however, we have listed only the major and most common problems.
